ANNUAL REPORT FOR THE YEAR 1975

1. Introduction

1975 was the last year of the triennium and was once more characterised by severe inflationary pressures (see Section 11 of this Report). The financial situation was therefore the subject of some uncertainty even before any plans for the next triennium were discussed. In May, the Universities Commission published its Sixth Report, which was not unsatisfactory, even though it did not recommend a number of the requests made by this University in its Submission. However, everything was thrown into confusion when the Federal Government in August rejected the Report, and announced that the triennial system would be suspended for 1976, which would be a year outside the triennial arrangements. This was followed in October by the "Mini-Report" which cut the allocation of recurrent funds for 1976 back from the hoped-for level to about the same level as 1975, and allowed only one new capital project. This made it necessary for the University to re-think completely its development plans for the next year or two. At the end of the year, there was still considerable uncertainty about the extent to which the University would be able to proceed with even modest plans for essential buildings and staff development.

In its Sixth Report, the Universities Commission stated that Adelaide, like the other older Australian Universities, is to be regarded from 1979 as a "developed" University, in which little or no growth of student members will be allowed. The emphasis will therefore be on improving the quality of the University, and encouraging development without growth. This will clearly present the University community with many problems to be solved over the next few years, and much will depend on the availability of additional finance not dependent primarily on student numbers, as it now is.

2. THE COUNCIL AND THE SENATE

In October, in accordance with the provisions of the University of Adelaide Act 1971-72, Mr. M. J. Evans and Mr. R. J. McGowan retired as members of the Council elected by the undergraduates. Mr. P. E. J. Broderick, who had been elected for a two year term in 1974, submitted his resignation from the Council after having served only one year, thus causing a casual vacancy. Only two nominations were received for the three vacancies on the Council with the result that Mr. G. J. Adam and Mr. R. C. Bleechmore filled the vacancies caused by the normal retirements and the casual vacancy was left unfilled.

In November, Professor J. H. Carver and Dr. E. H. Medlin were re-elected by the Convocation of Electors as members of the Academic staff. Miss V. T. Baddams, Mr. Mervyn Smith and Mr. H. V. Winter retired as members of the Councl not engaged in the employment of the University and offered themselves for re-election; Miss Baddams and Mr. Smith were re-elected while Mr. M. J. Evans was elected in place of Mr. Winter.

Dr. R. C. Heddle retired as a member of the Council who is a full-time employee of the University but not a member of the academic staff, but was re-elected for a further term of four years. Mr. W. D. Gould retired as the postgraduate student member of the Council and was also re-elected for a further term of two years.

Following the State elections five parliamentary members of the Council were appointed as required by Section 15(1) of The University of Adelaide Act 1971-72. The Hon. F. J. Potter, M.L.C., Mr. D. C. Brown, M.P., and Mr. D. W. Simmons, M.P. were re-elected, while Mr. R. K. Abbott, M.P., took the place vacated by Mr. P. Duncan, M.P., and the Hon. J. A. W. Levy, M.L.C. (who until her election to the Legislative Council had been Senior Tutor in Genetics in the University) took the place vacated by the Hon. A. Chatterton, M.L.C.

At its meeting in November, the Senate re-elected Mr. W. M. Rogers as its Warden and Mr. H. E. Wesley Smith as its Clerk. Mr. O. G. Jones, Dr. E. H. Medlin and Mr. G. C. Prior were re-elected as members of the Standing Committee.

During the year three of the Council's Parliamentary members were appointed as Ministers in the State Government—the Hon. B. A. Chatterton, Minister for Agriculture; Mr. P. J. Duncan, Attorney-General; and Mr. D. W. Simmons, Minister for the Environment.

3. Staff

Iensen on his retirement.

CONDITIONS OF SERVICE OF STAFF

The decision of the Australian Conciliation and Arbitration Commission to introduce quarterly adjustments to the National Wage has benefited all full-time staff of the University, whose salaries were increased in line with increases in the Consumer Price Index. A subsidiary effect has been that there have been few alterations to salary scales other than by the application of the National Wage increases.

The Council has increased by one-third the provision for assistance with the removal expenses of new lecturing staff appointed from outside South Australia; and it also made, for the first time, provision for assistance where necessary with the transfer costs of personally owned "tools of trade"—professional libraries, specialised equipment, collections of specimens, etc.

After five years of wide-ranging discussions the Study Leave Committee submitted to Council a revised scheme to govern the conditions under which academic staff members may take study leave. The new conditions and procedures, approved by Council, and coming into effect on 1 January 1977, allow both for more flexibility and for more generous financial support. However, for the first triennium at least, the financial provisions of the scheme will of necessity operate at a reduced level, in view of the cutback in the University's recurrent

In June the Academic Salaries Tribunal began a comprehensive enquiry into the salaries of academic staff (full-time and part-time) and chief executive officers in universities and colleges of advanced education. The Council made a submission to the Tribunal, and the University was visited by the Tribunal in October.

Following the decisions made in 1974, further consideration was given during the year to the conditions of appointment of tutoring grade staff and in particular to the maximum periods of appointments of such staff. Recommendations made by the Education Committee were approved by Council at the end of the year.

Throughout the year representatives of the University and of the Staff Association met from time to time to discuss various aspects of the conditions of service of professional staff. Some modifications to the Industrial Agreement made in 1974 were agreed to by the University and the Association. These were related to work performed at week-ends and on public holidays, rostered duty, and certain matters of a procedural nature.

A major development in regard to ancillary staff was the reconstitution of the three committees concerned principally with ancillary staff matters.

A revised promotion procedure was instituted involving personal applications from ancillary staff and providing for a process of formal consideration at departmental level.

Agreement was reached with the Ancillary Staff Association for the introduction on a trial basis of a disciplinary and dismissal procedure and of a procedure for considering the grievances of members of the ancillary staff.

Following representations from the Ancillary Staff Association, the Council has agreed to improve significantly the provisions of the superannuation scheme for ancillary staff, from 1 January 1976. In view of the increased cost of the new scheme, its introduction will be spread over a period of two to three years.

The High Court rejected the application by the Municipal Officers Association for prerogative writs, referred to in last year's Report, thereby confirming the decision of the Industrial Court that the Municipal Officers' Association could not cover University non-academic staff. The attempt by that Association to obtain a Federal Award has now ceased.

There was again a high level of consultation between Australian Universities on staff matters during 1975. The examination of methods of working towards greater uniformity in salaries and conditions for non-academic staff of all Australian Universities is continuing.

5. Academic Matters

A Chair and a Department of Community Medicine were created in the Faculty of Medicine at the beginning of 1975.

The course for the degree of Master of Engineering Science was introduced in 1975. It requires one year of full-time or 2-5 years of part-time advanced study and project work and the submission of a thesis.

A new course for a postgraduate Diploma in Library Studies also began in 1975. This course requires one year of full-time or two years of part-time study; it was offered on a part-time basis only in 1975. Its object is to prepare students for responsible roles in professional work in Librarianship, with due regard both to basic principles and to the implications of the latest technology in the handling of information.

Drama, Chinese and Japanese were introduced for the first time as subjects in the B.A. curriculum.

In July 1975, the University took a unique step in aboriginal relations by establishing a Centre for Aboriginal Studies in Music in which Tribal Elders were given the status of Visiting Lecturers. The tribal Aborigines are involved in teaching undergraduate and postgraduate students Aboriginal music as part of their course work; while urban Aboriginal children and adults learn Western music as part of a music therapy programme. This development grew out of the teaching and research projects of Dr. Catherine Ellis, a member of staff of the Music Department, who has specialised in ethnomusicology. For the present the major financial resources of the Centre are provided by a grant from the Australia Council.

The University has accepted an offer by the Institute of Medical and Veterinary Science to establish a Chair in Pathology at the Institute. The Faculty of Medicine hopes that the establishment of this Chair will restore the historical relationship between the I.M.V.S. and the University; restore clinical pathology as a University discipline; provide resources for research and improve facilities for teaching; and provide a focus for research at the Institute.

The University has also accepted an offer by the Anti-Cancer Foundation to establish a Readership in Clinical Oncology in order to provide special expertise in the teaching of Clinical Oncology and to co-ordinate contributions from various disciplines.

The Committee on Assessment, referred to in last year's Report, produced a report which was debated widely within the University and, after some modification by the Education Committee, accepted by the Council. The Council commended to departments certain principles of assessment formulated by the Committee. Among these were that assessment should be used as far as possible for educative purposes; there should be open discussion between staff and students both on methods of assessment for a course and on the assessed work itself; students should be given a choice of assessment methods which should be related to the course aims and the needs of individual students; students should have a right to re-assessment of their work; a failed student should have an automatic right to redeem his failure; and the stress associated with examinations should be reduced and their conduct made more informal. The implementation of these recommendations will be monitored in due course.

Another important review, that of the University's Committee structure, which had been begun in 1973, was completed during the year. As a result of the recommendations made, the Council approved a re-organisation of the Committee structure, although there was little change in the total number and size of the University's committees. The new structure is intended to improve co-ordination of discussions and recommendations made by the "Ways and Means Committees", which have responsibility for allocating resources, and to ensure that all recommendations other than those dealing with purely financial or personal matters are channelled to the Council through the Education Committee as the University's major fully representative committee. The Ways and Means Committees will in future report to the Education Committee through a new committee, the Co-ordinating Committee, which replaces the former Allocations Committee and which will also be responsible for preparing the University's triennial submissions to the Universities Commission. The Planning Committee will be responsible only for long term planning and will also report to the Council through the Education Committee. A University Safety Committee was also established for the first time. All Committees have been asked to prepare detailed statements of their terms of reference and their procedures for the approval of the Council.

6. The Act, Statutes and Regulations

The Council decided to seek an amendment to the University Act to enable it to confer an honorary degree of Doctor of the University.

It intends that this degree should be available for conferment on persons, not members of staff of the University, who have rendered distinguished service to the University, and on former members of staff who have given it long and meritorious service.

Variations to statutes and regulations were made during the year as follows:

Statutes:

Chapter XLIX (Of the Appointments Board) was repealed and replaced by a new Chapter XLIX entitled "Of the Careers Advisory Board".

Chapters VIII (Of the Academic Year), X (Of the Faculties), XIII (Of the Angas Engineering Scholarships and the Angas Engineering Exhibitions), XVIII (Of Academic Dress), XXV (Miscellaneous), XXX (Of the Tinline Scholarship), XXXII (Infectious Diseases), LV (Of the Fred Johns Scholarship for Biography), LXXX (Of the Barr Smith Travelling Scholarship in Agriculture) and LXXXI (Of the Kenneth and Hazel Milne Travelling Scholarship in Architecture) were amended.

Regulations:

Regulations were made to establish and govern two new degrees, namely Doctor of Engineering and Master of Clinical Science, and a new Diploma in Psychotherapy; and the regulations of the degrees of Master of Arts, Master of Engineering and Doctor of Laws were repealed and replaced by new regulations.

Amendments were made to the regulations governing the degrees of Bachelor of Agricultural Science, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Architecture, Bachelor of Dental Surgery, Bachelor of Science in Dentistry, Bachelor of Economics, Bachelor of Engineering, Bachelor of Laws, Bachelor of Medicine and Bachelor of Surgery, Bachelor of Medical Science, Bachelor of Music, Bachelor of Science in the Faculty of Mathematical Sciences, Bachelor of Science in the Faculty of Science, Master of Agricultural Science, Master of Architecture, Master of Town Planning (the name of which was changed to Master of Urban and Regional Planning), Master of Education, Master of Dental Surgery, Master of Business Management, Master of Economics, Master of Engineering Science, Master of Applied Science, Master of Laws, Master of Science in the Faculty of Mathematical Sciences, Master of Science in the Faculty of Science in the Faculty of Mathematical Sciences, Doctor of Science in the Faculty of Mathematical Sciences, Doctor of Medicine, Doctor of Philosophy.

Amendments were also made to the regulations of the Diplomas in Applied Psychology, Library Studies, Education, Advanced Education, Business Management and Computing Science. Many of the amendments were of a minor nature.

7. Research

106 grants were made to members of staff of the University by the Australian Research Grants Committee, totalling $990,921. These were distributed as follows:

5 projects in the Humanities and Social Sciences	68,348
6 projects in the Physical Sciences	59,457
26 projects in the Chemical Sciences	216,648
41 projects in the Biological Sciences	286,923
11 projects in the Earth Sciences	44,642
8 projects in the Engineering and Applied Sciences	79,437
2 projects in the Marine Sciences	19,641
7 projects in Upper Atmosphere Research	215,825

The largest single grant was $131,410 for a project by Professor J. H. Carver and Dr. B. H. Horton (Upper Atmosphere Research).

The National Health and Medical Research Council awarded 23 grants totalling $225,264 for projects concerned with medical research, and scholarships for 2 medical and dental postgraduate research scholars.

The Reserve Bank awarded grants totalling $53,022 under the Rural Credits Development Fund Scheme to support research specifically concerned with primary industry.

The Australian Biological Resources Study Interim Council awarded grants totalling $14,972, and a number of individual grants from other organisations were made to members of staff. These included a grant of $28,970 from the Australian Wool Corporation for continuation of the postgraduate programme in wool economics research training under the direction of Professor F. G. Jarrett.

The Australian Road Research Board jointly with the Australian Department of Transport have entered into an agreement with the University to sponsor a detailed study of road accidents. Under the terms of the agreement the Sponsors have agreed to make a grant of $345,000 over a period of three years. To carry out the study the University has set up a Road Accident Research Unit, under the direction of Dr. A. J. McLean. The Unit is now engaged on a multidisciplinary study of the causes of road accidents, and the ensuing injuries, in metropolitan Adelaide. The investigations are conducted by one of two teams, each comprising a behavioural scientist, an engineer and a medical officer. The team reaches the scene of the accident soon after the ambulance, and continues to gather data at the hospital, crash repair shops and from interviews with the participants. The Department of Transport also sponsored a seminar, which was organised by this Unit, on the evaluation of road accident countermeasures. It was attended by senior administrators from State and Federal agencies. The Chairman of the U.S. National Motor Vehicle Safety Advisory Council was among the three lecturers brought from overseas for this seminar.

The Research Executive Committee in 1975 expended $773,000 (University Research Grant) on various categories of general support of research by staff members and on the training of postgraduate students. 23 postdoctoral fellows were funded by the Committee and 38 new awards were made to postgraduate scholars; 91 second or later year graduate students were also supported. The Committee also funded the visits of 4 distinguished scholars under its Visiting Professor scheme.

8. The Barr Smith Library

During 1975 the Library made 268,419 extramural loans to personal borrowers. Volumes lent for use only within the Library included 104,168 from the Undergraduate Services Department reserve, 17,430 from the Medical Library reserve, and 6,146 from the Special Collections Section. The Library satisfied 26,758 requests for interlibrary loans comprising 20,899 from libraries within the State and 5,859 from libraries in other states and countries. The Library received 4,245 loans from other libraries.

Following the decision in 1974 to discontinue the imposition of fines, a system of sanctions based on the award of demerit points, leading ultimately to possible temporary withdrawal of borrowing privileges, and applicable to all borrowers, was introduced at the beginning of the academic year, in an attempt to encourage borrowers to return books on time. The new system achieved a reasonable degree of success and acceptance.

As part of its teaching function the Library conducted 34 seminars which catered for 314 advanced students, and conducted 208 tours and seminars which catered for 2,183 undergraduates.

Holdings at the end of 1975 were as follows: Central Library 609,894 volumes; Law Library 46,548; Medical Library 77,886; Music Library 2,000 bound volumes of scores (and 13,127 pieces of music in sheets); and the Waite Agricultural Research Institute Library 31,022 volumes; making total holdings of 780,477 volumes in printed form. In addition, the Library held the equivalent of 60,354 volumes in microform.

Accessions were again in 1975 the highest ever recorded by the Library, totalling 45,309 catalogued volumes, the equivalent of a further 4,563 volumes in microform, and 184 pieces of music in sheets. Serial titles received numbered 19,538.

Expenditure on salaries, books, serials and binding and on other library requirements amounted to $2,083,726.

Many members of the university community as well as other benefactors made gifts of books and unpublished papers to the Library.

Preparation for the introduction of the projected on-line circulation system reached an advanced stage by the end of the year. The Library accepted the invitation of the Flinders University Library to cooperate with it in a limited project to order and process machine-readable cataloguing records; results were encouraging.

The organisation of the staff was improved by the introduction of the non-graduate Library Assistant Grades I and II, and by other changes foreshadowed by the Council's decisions of 1973 and 1974. Two important innovations at the level of professional librarianship were the appointment of a Training Librarian and a Chinese and Japanese Language Specialist.

9. The Advisory Centre for University Education

During the second complete year of its existence, the Centre conducted 20 courses and 8 seminars, attended by 666 people in all, and varying in length from an hour or two to 4 days. Seven occasional papers, a book on University Teaching, and a booklet on Course Planning, were produced. Curriculum evaluations were undertaken in five departments. Technical advice on audio-visual equipment has been made available and photographic work, including the colour processing of prints and transparencies, has been carried out for a large number of departments.

10. Sites and Buildings

The remainder of the approved projects for the triennium 1973-75 (except one) were completed in the course of the year. These were an extension to the Mawson Building (for Geology); improvements to the Fisher Building (for Zoology); and the final stage of the Union Building extensions. Unfortunately, the one remaining project, the provision of the first stage of non-Collegiate housing for students, was held up by difficulties in obtaining planning permission and was not quite ready to go to tender when the Federal Government's restraints on spending came into effect in August. Later, the Government withdrew the capital grant that had earlier been approved for this project.

In addition to buildings funded from Government sources, work proceeded on the Charles Hawker Conference Centre with funds provided to the University's Centenary Appeal by a private benefactor. This Centre, located at the Waite Institute, was eventually completed as the in 1076.

Work continued on the second stage of the University's Site Development Study, and as part of this Study a major review of the reticulated services on the University site was undertaken. It is hoped that as a result of this, the existing services can be rationalised, and major savings made in the consumption of energy and the costs of these services.

During the year, there appeared two major reports which will have an important bearing on the long-term development of the North Terrace campus—the revised City of Adelaide Plan and the Report of the North Terrace Land Use Committee. The latter promises to have a considerable effect on the future of the University, as it envisages that the University will take over the buildings occupied by the South Australian Institute of Technology and the Adelaide College of Advanced Education when those two institutions amalgamate and move to the East End Market area. In addition, the Trades School site will be handed over to the University so that it can erect a Concert Hall and School of Music facing Kintore Avenue and north of the State Library. Under the NTLUC Report, the University will also acquire a block of land directly north of the Medical School on which it will erect a new Medical Sciences building about the same size as the existing Medical School. It is estimated that these acquisitions will eventually increase the site of the North Terrace campus by 25 per cent to 42 acres. The timing of the programme is still to be determined, but it is envisaged that the acquisition of the land for the Medical Sciences building and the new Concert Hall will take place within the next three years. The rest of the Report's proposal, however, may well take 10 to 15 years to put into effect. Following the release of the NTLUC Report, the City of Adelaide Development Plan will have a lesser effect on the University than was first anticipated. The City of Adelaide Plan envisages no increase in floor space in the educational complex north of North Terrace, but with the additional buildings which will come to the University, along with the Universities Commission's decision to classify Adelaide as a "no growth" university, the University should be able to manage for the foreseeable future within the restrictions laid down in the Plan.

11. FINANCIAL MATTERS

Inflation at the high level which prevailed during the year 1974 was again experienced in 1975 and the University once again found it necessary to exercise strict economies in revenue expenditure in an endeavour to limit excesses of expenditure over income to an acceptable level.

The necessity to meet, as a first charge against the funds available to the University in 1975, an accumulated deficit of $590,000 incurred in 1974 and previous years, despite all efforts to economise, resulted in a revenue deficit of $379,000 in 1975. The seriousness of the incidence of budget deficits which have to be met from funds available in succeeding years and which, in effect, amount to deficit budgeting, remains a matter of real concern to the University and is attributable almost entirely to the cost escalation in salaries and wages of non-academic staff and, to a lesser degree, increases in the cost of other non-wage items at levels similar to those experienced in 1974. The Universities Commission provided supplementary grants, subject to quarterly review, to meet cost escalation of non-academic salaries, national wage increases and certain non-wage items according to a formula based on national indices during 1975. This basis of supplementation will be replaced in 1976 by the introduction of a single national index to be used to adjust recurrent grants and constructed from three major components of recurrent expenditure, viz., academic salaries, general salaries, and non-salary costs. The University has been informed that the Australian Government has decided that the calendar year 1976 will be treated as a year outside the triennial progression and will, in effect, be a year which maintains the level of recurrent expenditure at existing standards.

Against the background of steadily increasing staff costs referred to above, a successful exercise in reducing such costs in one particular area should be recorded. During the year the University, with the advice of outside consultants, and with the support of all concerned, including the Ancillary Staff Association, conducted a major survey of its cleaning and caretaking operations, which resulted in a reduction of 15% in its part-time cleaning staff without any reduction in cleaning standards. Unfortunately, rapidly increasing wage rates will very soon eat up the resulting savings in cleaning costs.

12. STATISTICS

Numbers of Students: The total number of students was 9,626, an increase of 325 on the enrolment of the previous year. Higher Degree enrolments continued to rise, attaining a record level of 1,154.

The tendency in recent years towards a greater proportion of full-time enrolments continued in 1975. Full-time enrolments represented $67\cdot9\%$ of the total, or, excluding the Elder Conservatorium of Music, $69\cdot5\%$.

14. STUDENT HEALTH SERVICE

The Director of the Service reports that throughout the year, possibly because of the high unemployment situation, students have been subject to continual pressure to do well. This has resulted in a considerable increase (from 369 to 448) in the number of students who exhibited uncertainties in regard to their future careers. Many of these students appear to have no time for extra-curricular activities or relaxation. Many also get insufficient sleep, especially in the third term, with impairment of their ability to study and sit for examina-

The Director further reports that the drug problem appears to be diminishing, though there are still cases resulting from the continued use of hallucinogens, but the two main problems now appear to be the abuse of alcohol and over-use of tranquillisers at stress periods. There was an increase in cases of glandular fever, also connected with over-tiredness and over-work.

First Aid courses were conducted for 20 member of the ancillary staff and postgraduate and undergraduate students. There was an increase in accidents to undergraduate students (from 52 to 78) and to ancillary staff (from 211 to 275) in the Science Departments, thus emphasising the need for the newly-established Safety Committee.

A second full-time medical officer has been appointed to the staff of the Service and will make possible a considerable increase in its efficiency.

The total number of individual services rendered during the year was 12,296, including 1,845 routine medical examinations of students, 3,090 casualties, 2,887 return visits from casualty service, 1,559 Poliomyelitis immunisations, 470 Tetanus Prophylactic injections and 1,746 Mantoux tests. The total does not include Chest X-rays arranged by the Service at the City X-ray Unit.

Of the 3,090 casualties, 1,317 were organic illnesses, 1,136 emotional or social problems, 535 accidents and 102 sports injuries.

15. STUDENT COUNSELLING SERVICE

Recorded individual counselling discussions, typically of one hour duration on each occasion, were conducted with 739 students of all faculties and years, both undergraduate and postgraduate. The difficulties for which assistance was sought ranged widely throughout educational, vocational and personal matters, often in combination, but always in uniquely individual circumstances. The proportion of students who are seriously disturbed and who require long term psychotherapy appears to be steadily increasing. Counselling was also provided to a number of members of the academic staff, in several cases regularly and intensively throughout the year. Group activities to foster socialisation and personal development were conducted throughout the year, involving a record 217 individual students. The service has continued to take a leading part in the activities of the Tertiary Co-ordinating Committee for Secondary School Liaison.

16. Adult Education

In 1975 the University's educational station 5UV began broadcasting on the medium wave broadcast band, at 530 kHz. The new experimental licence was first offered at 1,560 kHz but tests showed that this frequency was not satisfactory because of interference from powerful interstate stations.

Previously the station had transmitted on that part of the spectrum reserved for fixed and mobile services and, under the terms of its licence, suffered a number of constraints including an inability to broadcast music. The new licence allows broadcast rights similar to those of national and commercial stations, but the station must allow some access to community groups with educational aims, including ethnic societies.

5UV was on air from March 3 until December 20 inclusive and broadcast daily. The two major programme developments in Music and Access were mainly responsible for a considerable increase in the hours of transmission from a weekly average of 19 hours (1974) to 45 hours (1975).

5UV had many more listeners because of its more favourable position on the dial and its more varied and interesting programmes.

The main groups seeking access were ethnic societies and student radio. Ethnic groups broadcast on an average of 6 hours weekly during the last term and there are additional applications currently before the Access Committee. Student Radio, largely conducted by students of this University, have been on the air for almost 7 hours weekly, their programmes concerning themselves with student news, information for secondary students on university life, and music.

The Conservation Council and the Mental Health Association conducted regular programmes and the Department of Further Education used the station's facilities for a series of programmes on Drama for the Theatregoer.

The station also produced a number of general interest programmes on current events and the lively arts, and received regular programmes from overseas organisations such as The British Council, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and Radio Nederlands.

The following summary of activities shows that the Department's other work was advanced by a variety of means and methods.

Seminars and Schools: Twenty-seven schools, seminars and conferences were arranged with a total enrolment of 1,435. These courses varied in length and content and included the Pitjantjatjara Intensive Language Course (19 days), the Music School (14 days), the Art School (8 days), and a conference for Adult Educators in Universities (2 days).

Residential Courses: Some Schools were partly or wholly residential; for example, the Natural History School, Music, Art, Aspects of South Australian History, and week-end refresher courses for language students.

Extension Courses: These courses, designed for professional and occupational groups, were held on such topics as Engineer to Management—A Wider Perspective, Economics for Other Professions, Estate and Tax Planning, Educational Administration, Child Care and Development. Five were conducted during evenings on a weekly basis (enrolment 352) and eight by radio (enrolment 476).

Courses for General Public: Fifty-five classes were conducted mainly in the evenings, on a weekly basis including 22 language courses (enrolment 1,109), and 15 by radio (enrolment 1,209).

Discussion Courses: Ten groups met regularly in metropolitan and rural centres to discuss courses in philosophy, literature, comparative religion and music. The Discussion Course Scheme was substantially revised and new courses offered include: The Novels of Jane Austen, Patrick White—6 novels, The Victorian Age Described, The Life and Work of Anthony Trollope, Introduction to the Symphony, and China Since Chairman Mao.

Publications: The quarterly journal Issue published many papers from the Department's seminars. As well, Our Forests in Focus was published separately and a grant from the Australian Department of Aboriginal Affairs made possible the publication of a Pitjantjatjara adaptation of Alice in Wonderland called Aliti in the Dreamtime. This is printed in parallel texts and is the first publication of its kind in Australia. As initiators of the annual Pitjantjatjara courses, the department has long seen the need to have publications in the language for new literates and those studying it as a second language. This is expected to be the beginning of a series of publications in Pitjantjatjara.

17. Careers Advisory Board

The first meeting of the new Careers Advisory Board was held on 3 October 1975. The members are drawn from senior academic staff, representatives of commerce, industry and Government, and postgraduate and undergraduate students. Professor J. P. Quirk was elected Chairman.

Graduate Employment:

In common with other sections of the community, graduates are having increasing difficulty in finding employment; of the graduates who completed their course in 1974, 6.1% of those replying to the annual questionnaire were unemployed or under-employed at 30 April 1975. (The corresponding figure in 1974 was 2.3%.)

The South Australian Education Department is now receiving more applications for employment than it has vacancies, and graduates whose course does not include school teaching subjects will now find it almost impossible to find employment as teachers.

Although the number of Arts and Science generalist graduates who had difficulty in finding employment was not great in 1975, it will be necessary to keep a close watch on the situation in subsequent years when the effects of the phasing out of the bonding scheme by the South Australian Education Department will be more keenly felt. There will be an increasing need to find new openings for graduates and for graduates to accept traditionally non-graduate employment.

Information Services:

In an effort to make students more aware of the changing pattern, a series of newsletters "Options" is being sent to students in various faculties.

During the year, the campus interview programme was continued. Thirty-seven employers visited the campus and over 1,600 interviews were arranged.

Representatives from the Professional Employment Office of the Department of Employment and Industrial Relations interviewed 260 graduating students on campus and gave excellent support in the search for career opportunities.

The hand-book "Graduate Careers", produced by the Graduate

Careers Council of Australia, was distributed to over 1,400 graduands and other career material was made available.

60,000 copies of the broadsheet "Careers and Courses in South Australia" were prepared in collaboration with the Youth Employment Service of the Department of Employment and Industrial Relations and distributed to Year 10, 11 and 12 school leavers in the State.

Vacation Employment:

In common with all other Australian Universities, considerable difficulties were encountered in finding vacation employment needed for students to complete their course requirements and it might become necessary to review the requirements for such work experience.

18. The University Union

During 1975 the Union's major rebuilding programme was completed and the new premises came into full use early in the year. The facilities provided include a bar and a fully-licensed bistro, a gallery with reading and music listening areas, a studio with craft and photographic facilities, two squash courts, the Union shop and pharmacy, a travel agency, a cinema, and a Little Theatre with 120 seats. The bar and bistro have been well patronised and are going a long way towards putting into effect the Union's aim to provide a common meeting ground for staff, students and graduates.

The new building has been recognised by the South Australian Chapter of the Royal Australian Institute of Architects as the most important building completed in 1975 and received its annual award.

The year was one of upheaval to begin with and finally of consolidation as the organisation of the new facilities came to dominate the time and energies of the Union Council and the professional staff.

During the year, the Union finally fulfilled its aim of setting up a Child Care Centre for students. It was able to locate a suitable building and the property was bought and reconditioned by the University late in the year for commissioning early in 1976. The Council has made the building available to the Union rent-free.

The Warden of the Union spent 13 weeks in America and Europe on a study tour, visiting University Unions and Performing Arts Centres.

19. Student Matters

The Non-Collegiate Housing project at Gilberton referred to in last year's report had been planned in two stages. During the year detailed planning was completed and, after some delay because of appeals, Planning and Building approvals were confirmed. The first stage for 72 students was intended to be built during 1975 and the second stage for 100 during 1976. However, in August 1975 the Commonwealth Government's newly announced restraints on spending led to the withdrawal of funds for Stage I and the deferral of triennial funding until after 1976. Before the withdrawal of funds only 12 housing places had been finished, these being in two large renovated houses on the Gilberton site. The University in December 1975 made a submission through the Universities Commission for the balance of 160 places to be funded in the 1977-1979 triennium.

The University Loan Fund is designed to provide financial assistance to needy students who might otherwise be unable successfully to continue with their academic work. During the year there were 134 applications for assistance from the Fund, in response to which $38,340 was made available in repayable loans and $1,625 in non-repayable grants. In addition, a Short-term Loan Fund assisted 88 students for whom repayable loans totalling $4,047 were approved.

20. MISCELLANEOUS

In August 1975, the Vice-Chancellor attended the Sixth General Conference of the International Association of Universities in Moscow. Discussions centred around the problems of higher education at the approach of the 21st Century. From Moscow, Professor Badger went on to China, where he spent two weeks at the invitation of the Academia Sinica, visiting universities, institutes, communes, and a motor-car factory. In November, Professor Badger visited Chile to take part in an international seminar entitled "Science and Technology: Transfer and Acquisition for National Development in the Pacific Basin" organised by the Andean Council for Higher Education and the Australian Society for Latin American Studies. Later, he visited universities in Brazil.

The University has been admitted as an Associate Member of the Association of Southeast Asian Institutions of Higher Learning.

During the year, new arrangements were brought into effect for the delivery of mail to students on the campus. All students now have their own named mail boxes in their departments or in the Union Building and a University roundsman delivers mail to the boxes every day. After a trial had indicated that the new system would enable the University to save considerable sums spent on postage (especially after the recent increases in postal charges), the system has been adopted on a permanent basis.

The University Council and the Senate have decided to introduce Postal Rolls for members of the Convocation of Electors and members of Senate. In the past, all members of these bodies were sent voting papers for University Council elections and papers for Senate meetings, irrespective of their wish to receive them. This practice imposed a heavy financial burden on the University, and also caused irritation to some members of the two bodies who did not wish to receive the material. All members of the two bodies will now be invited to place their names on the respective postal rolls, and convocation voting papers and papers for Senate meetings will in future be sent only to those who have so registered.

St. Mark's College, one of the residential Colleges affiliated with the University, celebrated its Jubilee in February 1975. It was established in 1924 by public subscription, and in 1925 became the first residential college to be affiliated with the University.

21. Financial Statements

An abstract of the income and expenditure of the University during 1975 is annexed to this Report, together with a further statement showing the actual position of the University with respect to its property, funds and liabilities at the close of 1975.

Signed on behalf of the Council,

J. J. BRAY,

Adelaide, 27 September, 1976.

Chancellor.

W. MEIKLEJOHN, Bursar.

We report that we have audited the various Books of Account and other records relating to the Income and Expenditure of The University of Adelaide in respect of the year which ended 31 December 1975, and we certify the above statement to be a correct abstract of such Income and Expenditure during the above period.

We further certify that in terms of sections 3 and 7 of the States Grants (Universities) Act 1972-1974 and subsequent amendments in relation to the year 1975 the above financial statement correctly sets out the Commonwealth Grants received by the University of Adelaide, that the Commonwealth Grant for recurrent purposes paid to the University in that year has been applied for expenditure (other than for the purposes of land, buildings and equipment expenditure as defined in the Act) on University purposes and that the Commonwealth grant of $299,333 has been applied for expenditure on special research purposes.

The University of Adelaide

W. MEIKLEJOHN, Bursar.

We report that we have audited the above statement of Income and Expenditure of the Separate Accounts of The University of Adelaide for the year which ended 31 December 1975, and certify this statement to be a correct abstract of Income and Expenditure during this period.

YARWOOD VANE & CO., Chartered Accountants. TOUCHE ROSS & CO., Chartered Accountants.

Adelaide, 15 April, 1976.

COMMEMORATION ADDRESSES, 1976

There were four ceremonies for the conferring of degrees: on Wednesday, 28 April at 11.00 a.m. and 3.00 p.m. and on Wednesday, 5 May at 11.00 a.m. and 3.00 p.m.

The Visitor to the University, His Excellency Emeritus Professor Sir Mark Oliphant and Lady Oliphant were present at the morning ceremony on 28 April, 1976. His Excellency was welcomed by the Chancellor who then invited him to address the congregation.

His Excellency addressed the congregation as follows:

Mr. Chancellor, Mr. Vice-Chancellor, Members of the Council and Senate of the University of Adelaide, ladies and gentlemen.

This is my swan-song as Visitor to the University. Next year, another Governor will hold that ex officio post. I say swan-song because it is a sad occasion for me, and what I have to say to you today is not cheerful, though it is, I hope, optimistic.

The University of Adelaide was established on the Scottish rather than the English model, though its academic dress is borrowed, largely, from Cambridge. This was natural, for among the early British settlers in South Australia a preponderance of those who cherished learning were Scots. In the beginning, the University was an institution for training professional people, but it was fortunate in soon attracting to its staff men of the highest calibre who developed here the search for new knowledge. Among them were two whom I was to know well in England, where the fame they had won while in Adelaide led to greater opportunities for research. One was Horace Lamb, the father of hydrodynamics, the other William Bragg, who with his son, Laurence, became the father of X-ray crystallography. In other fields, also, members of the University of Adelaide were creating fresh understanding of the structure and biology of this new human environment.

The growth in academic stature of our University was very rapid. It soon generated its own ethos, its own approaches to scholarship and research, establishing its place as one of the foremost such institutions in the world. In one way, however, it has continued to be a colonial university, in that it still exports a great part of its product—graduates and postgraduates—abroad and to other States. By this free export of a very valuable product, upon which much money and effort has been expended, it brings back to South Australia little or no economic return.

I suggest, therefore, that the University, together with its sister tertiary institutions, should endeavour to keep more of its product at home, by encouraging in every way a different pattern of enterprise in the Adelaide area. Branches of great international companies are interested only in the production, locally, of standard items, the development and design of which is done abroad in their major installations. Smaller industries, mostly established in the past by enterprising men, make substitutes for imported articles, like washing machines, gas and electric cookers, textiles, clothing, furniture, building materials, and so on. In the service fields like banking, insurance, transport, roads, water, gas, electricity, there has been little room for innovation, the patterns of the businesses being established elsewhere, often by forces over which there can be no local control.

There are, however, sufficient examples of new enterprises which originated in this State, and have been successful commercially, to encourage a belief that there could be many more. The manufacture by "Sola" of hard plastic spectacle lenses, and other optical components, which are far lighter than those made from glass, employs a substantial number of highly qualified people, and has become a significant export earner. Use of ultra-violet light for sterilisation in hospitals, food storage, etc., has been developed very successfully here. The small firm "Codan", making sophisticated radio-communications transceivers and related equipment, has grown from nothing to the major supplier for Australia, and it is always developing new products. These very adaptive and successful industries, in both the domestic and the export markets, are examples of what can be achieved given knowledge, know-how and drive.

Around M.I.T., Stanford and Cal. Tech. in the United States, a whole host of new enterprises have been born, based upon research and development carried out in these institutions, Many began in sheds in back gardens. Few had, initially, greater capital than that provided by the inventors themselves. These relatively small ventures, based on high technology and determination, have made an outstanding contribution to communications, instruments, aerodynamics and space enterprises, high voltage engineering, and the defence needs of the United States.

Similar developments could become the backbone of the economy of South Australia. We lack the gigantic resources in raw materials of Queensland or Western Australia. We do not possess the coal reserves of New South Wales and Queensland, or the enormous quantities of gas discovered on the North West Shelf. South Australia is the driest State in the Commonwealth, and thus much more limited in productivity in agriculture or animal husbandry.

However, possibly because our origins were largely Scottish and German, we have an outstanding record for the production of trained men who are innovators. Among the young today there are many potential Essington Lewis's, Floreys, Cairns, and others with originality in technology and medicine. South Australia, rather than America, Britain, or the eastern States, could grow rich on the products of the minds, and the enterprise, of such men and women, if we had the courage to back them. There is little risk capital required for the activities I have in mind in electronics, specialised engineering, acoustics, optics, ceramics, medical prostheses, metallurgy, printing, building materials, and so on. They begin small and grow naturally. The men and women who can originate such enterprises are being trained in our tertiary institutions, and especially the oldest, the University of Adelaide.

A special opportunity exists here for the development of new approaches to energy from the sun and from the winds. The relief from the crowded daily routines in medicine and surgery, provided by modern national medicare, should enable inventive minds in our medical schools to establish specialised industries in those fields. The possibilities are endless, if we have the courage to exploit them.

I hope that future Governors enjoy their terms as Visitors to this University as much as I have enjoyed the privilege of being associated in this way with my own alma mater. May the University continue to flourish, and to serve the community as it has, so well, for more than one hundred years.

At the afternoon ceremony on 28 April, 1976, the Chancellor, The Honourable Dr. J. J. Bray, addressed the congregation as follows:

Mr. Vice-Chancellor, Your Honour, My Lord Mayor, distinguished guests, Members of the Council and Senate, ladies and gentlemen.

First, I welcome you all to this Commemoration.

Next, as I have said before and will probably have occasion to say again, a Chancellor's speech on this occasion is commonly, like all Gaul in Julius Caesar's De Bello Gallico, divided into three parts. The first is to make reference to notable events in the life of the University during the past year, the second is to deliver some sort of brief dissertation on some sort of topic with some sort of academic relevance which should be short enough not to delay the proceedings beyond the usual hour and yet long enough to convey to the audience at least the illusion of having undergone some sort of intellectual experience. The third is to congratulate the new graduates. Again, as usual, I address myself to these three tasks.

There was a time within my memory when what the Chancellor did under the first of these heads was in effect to deliver the annual report, which is now so voluminous as to compel its relegation to the comparative obscurity of the calendar. There are some matters, however, to which I must make specific reference.

I record with sorrow the death of several persons connected with the University. First of all I refer to the recent death of Sir Mellis Napier, a judge of the Supreme Court of South Australia for 43 years, and for 25 of those Chief Justice, and Chancellor of the University from 1948 to 1961. I have attempted inadequately to pronounce his epicede in another place and I will not endeavour to repeat what I said then. The term of his chancellorship covered the immediate postwar period and the beginning of the enormous expansion of the University population, the University buildings and the University activities. For his prudent guidance and sage counsel during those crucial years we owe him an immeasurable debt.

I record also the deaths of Dr. K. P. J. Barley, Reader in Agronomy (member of staff since 1953), Mr. M. J. Barrett, Reader in Restorative Dentistry since 1951, and Emeritus Professor Sir Stanton Hicks

In all these cases I express our gratitude for services rendered to the University, our sorrow for the deaths and our sympathy for the relatives.

I turn to a more pleasing task to recite the honours conferred on distinguished members of the University community during the past year. I refer to the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Badger, who has become an Officer of the Order of Australia (A.O.), to Dr. Elliott, Reader in English, who has become a Member of the Order of Australia (A.M.), to Professor Potts and Professor Wallace who have become Fellows of the Australian Academy of Science (F.A.A.), and to Dr. McCredie who has become a Fellow of the Australian Academy of the Humanities (F.A.H.A.). We are proud of these distinctions and we congratulate the recipients.

Next, it is usual to note the exits and entrances, retirements and resignations on the one hand, and new appointments on the other.

I refer to the retirements of:

Professor R. A. Jensen, Professor of Architecture since 1956.

Dr. J. A. Cran, Reader in Oral Pathology and Oral Surgery since 1954.

Dr. Nancy Atkinson, Reader in Oral Biology (member of staff since 1939).

Dr. B. R. Elliott, Reader in English (member of staff since 1940). Mr. G. Sved, Reader in Civil Engineering (member of staff since 1950).

Mr. L. I. G. Iliffe, Senior Lecturer in Physics (member of staff since 1946).

Mr. B. Mason, Senior Lecturer in Geography since 1959.

and to the resignations of:

Professor G. C. Duncan (Professor of Politics) to take up the Chair of Politics at East Anglia University.

Dr. J. M. Tregenza (Reader in History) to become curator of Historial Collections at the Art Gallery of S.A.

I announce new appointments as follows:

Deputy Vice-Chancellors: Professor E. S. Barnes (formerly Professor of Pure Mathematics, Adelaide), and Professor K. A. Provins (formerly Professor of Psychology, A.N.U.).

Professor of Surgery: Professor R. G. Elmslie (formerly Reader in Surgery, Adelaide).

Professor of Community Medicine: Professor T. G. C. Murrel (formerly Reader in Community Medicine, Adelaide).

Professor of Medicine (Mortlock Chair): Professor D. J. C. Shearman (formerly Senior Lecturer in Medicine at Edinburgh University).

Professor of Zoology: Professor W. D. Williams (formerly Reader in Zoology, Monash University).

Professor of Agronomy (Waite Chair): Professor C. J. Driscoll (formerly Associate Professor of Botany, University of N.S.W.). Director of Environmental Studies: Dr. J. R. Hails (formerly of the National Environmental Research Council, U.K.).

I express our regrets at the departures and our thanks to those departing and our best wishes for their future, and I welcome the arrivals.

I turn now to the second part of my task. I want to say something about the conflicting performances expected of a University and the accusation of what it is now fashionable to call élitism so often levelled at universities. I recently read in the autobiography of the noted novelist and biographer Richard Aldington called Life for Life's Sake the following passage:

"There seems to be a certain amount of superstition about universities and their degrees, on which topic the remarks of Gibbon are still entirely cogent. Moreover, popular clamour urges them to contradictory aims. They are expected to give their students a superior training, technical or otherwise, which will enable them later to make more money than non-university students; and at the same time the cry is that everybody ought to be allowed to go to a university. Where, then, will the material advantage be? They are expected to produce men who are at once independent thinkers and docile acceptors of the status quo. They are supposed to be able to test intelligence and knowledge by an ancient Chinese custom of written examinations. If they raise their standards and plough the incompetent, they are called highbrow snobs; and if they yield to popular demand and bestow degrees on everybody who can read and cipher, they are quenching the torch of culture. Exposing the uneducable for a number of years to the supposed influences of academic buildings and discourses is a waste of time and money; while insistence on rigid elimination is an offence to the sovereign people. And it is not easy to see what, if anything, all this has to do with genuine culture.

These words were written more than 30 years ago, but they have lost none of their point over the intervening years. Indeed, their point has been sharpened.

Until comparatively recently the universities, in this country at least, opened their doors to all those who passed the entrance examinations. Of course, many who did so were unable to enter the academic portals because of lack of means. The undergraduate had to pay his fees, eat, drink and be clothed and lodged. Unless he got a scholarship his parents or guardians had to provide these things. Now for many reasons, which I will not stay to enumerate, the university cannot admit all those who are academically qualified for entry. What principle of selection is to be adopted? The one which we use is academic merit gauged as best we can from the information available to us. It may be hard to assess and no doubt some of those who are admitted should have been rejected and some of those who are rejected should have been admitted. Complaints are made of élitism. It is sometimes suggested that there should be a more random method of selection amongst those who have been matriculated and some wider consideration given to those who have not.

I want to pause for a moment to examine these complaints. The word "élite" is only the past-participle of the French verb "élire" meaning to elect. The New English Dictionary defines "an élite" as "the choice part or flower of society or of any body or class of persons". In the past the choice was often predetermined by birth or rank or wealth and no-one at the present time would defend any claim to privilege so founded.

But there remains the choice of nature. It is, I think, indisputable that, even after every artificial advantage conferred by the structure of society has been eliminated, all people are not equal in intellectual ability, just as all people are not equal in strength or beauty or artistic talent. No-one in other fields suggests random selection. Take as an example a beauty competition, to which many people, with whose views I sympathise, take objection as trivial or degrading. But if you must have beauty competitions it would be absurd to select the winners by the use of any criterion except beauty. Nor would anyone suggest choosing a cricket team at random from all the members of a club, or allotting the parts in a play by casting lots amongst the members of the company. In all such cases the criterion adopted is suitability for the projected task. So, surely, it must be with university entrants, so long as the quota system remains. It is a crime against society to waste the potential talent of its members. No doubt amongst those who are rejected as of lesser academic merit, and hence, presumptively, of lesser capacity to profit by tertiary education, there are many worthy of admission and their rejection is unfortunate. But to reject those of high academic merit on the basis of some assumed unfairness or inequality of opportunity would be to stultify ourselves and to deny the community the potential expertise of those prima facie best qualified to acquire it. By all means let us search for better ways of assessing academic merit, or potentiality to profit by tertiary education, but, in my view, we should not seek for alternative criteria.

I congratulate all those about to receive degrees, whether in person or in absentia. I hope you found your years at the University stimulating and rewarding, and not only intellectually. On behalf of the University I wish you good fortune in your various careers. I hope that you regard the University with affection and that you will continue to do so. One of many ways of manifesting your continuing regard would be to join the Graduates Union. Finally, I hope that you will not only distinguish yourselves in your professional lives, but exercise such influence in the community at large in innumerable contexts as befits educated men and women.

At the morning ceremony on 5 May, 1976, the Deputy Vice-Chancellor Professor K. A. Provins, addressed the congregation as follows:

Deputy Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor, Members of the Council and Senate, ladies and gentlemen.

First of all I should like to welcome you to this morning's Commemoration Ceremony and to congratulate most warmly those graduates receiving public recognition today of the successful completion of their various courses of study. To this I must add my very best wishes for the future and perhaps a reminder that the certificate of achievement which you receive today will also be seen by others as some sort of symbol of promise for the future. That is, it will be recognised as a sign of potential and of the means to apply it successfully in your chosen field whatever that may be. People will also have certain expectations of you to fulfil this promise. For some of you these expectations may have a more immediate and practical application than others—I am sure the first patients of those graduating today from the Faculty of Dentistry will know only too well what I mean. To a lesser extent the same may be said of those people destined to be the consumers or receivers of the practices or performances of our other graduates this morning.

But graduating from university is much more than either a mark of achievement or a statement of potential. Implicit in a university education is exposure to both the accumulated wisdom of our culture and a consideration of the current trends in our society. The former is readily acknowledged as a pre-requisite for the acquisition of the appropriate skills in whatever branch of knowledge a student undertakes to work. In this regard it may be worth pointing out that approximately one third of this university's graduates graduate in the professions, one third in the sciences and one third in Arts including Music, so that this morning's ceremony reflects very well this overall balance of interests. But no matter which of these three broad areas is considered, the increasing rate of accumulation of knowledge lays a heavy responsibility on the graduate as well as making greater demands on the student. For the accelerating rate at which information is building up means that graduates become out of date more quickly each year with the passage of time since graduation and unless frequent and positive steps are taken to keep in touch with recent advances, they can very easily become monuments to their era. Academics everywhere find it more and more difficult to keep abreast of their areas of specialisation and, wonder, when reference is made for example to the volume of material published over the last few decades. While it is difficult to obtain accurate or meaningful figures for publications as a whole, general trends may be inferred from the incredible growth in the number of scientific journals which has occurred in the last three hundred yearsan increase which has been exponential rather than linear¹. To illustrate further, the total number of volumes in this University's Library stood at 9,000 at the turn of the century which was 24 years after the collection had been started. Nine years later it had more than doubled its size, while by 1961 there were over 276,000 volumes on the shelves. In comparison, it must be pointed out that in the last five years only there has been an increase in the library's holdings of over a quarter of a million volumes².

The full implications of this great expansion of knowledge are difficult to appreciate. Already there is a growing emphasis on continuing education in the community and an awareness in many professions of the need for "refresher" courses. Whether the university or some other tertiary institution is the most appropriate organisation to provide these postgraduate studies poses a question which requires more time for discussion than I have at my disposal this morning.

Nevertheless, the question of the ever increasing rate of accumulation of knowledge is also very relevant to the second point I made concerning those things which are implicit in a university education—namely, a consideration of the current trends in our society. In this regard, it is worth recalling some of the comments made by Lord Todd in his Centenary Oration to this university in 1974³. He referred particularly to the importance of the rapid changes in science and technology, their implications for the future and the challenge which this presents in seeing that they are used to benefit mankind but with the minimum of "wasteful and destructive inroads upon our natural resources and our physical environment". But he also touched upon the lag in educational patterns in responding to this challenge by developing new courses in environmental science for example. Nevertheless, it is true to say that universities have responded in Australia (including Adelaide) by offering an increased range and number of courses in this area and by providing for a greatly increased demand for enrolment in re-oriented but already existing social and biological courses.

Certainly the extent of the environmental impact has been slow to gain recognition and there are many people still not convinced of the critical nature of the problems associated with the growth in world population, the rate of utilisation of natural resources and the cumulative adverse effects of inadequate waste disposal. There is also the view that if the problems are as serious as some such as Ehrlich⁴ would have us believe, then since the advances and misuse of science and technology got us into this mess then the appropriate application of further advances in knowledge will get us out again. This, of course, may be true if the time is available, but in the interim, the information explosion continues, more sophisticated industrial processes are developed and the rate of change of our way of life continues to accelerate.

The social implications of rapid advances in science and technology are nowhere better illustrated than in the realm of transport and communications. The revolution which has occurred in the field of radio and television with satellite links across the world together with the rapid movement of people and supplies by jet aircraft means that geographical and social isolation is a thing of the past. Events in some small corner of one country may be common knowledge in another on the other side of the world within 24 hours and the people who figured in the story may arrive there very shortly afterwards. The "average" person in any given community is probably more aware than at any previous period in history of the number and variety of other communities living in the world today. This awareness has probably contributed in no small measure to the resurgence of interest in courses in Anthropology for example, which is clearly evident in this university as well as elsewhere.

But while this growing awareness of other communities and places has undoubtedly stimulated interest in people to visit or migrate to other countries and while the increasing availability of rapid transportation has facilitated this process, these developments have also given rise to problems. Apart from the costs as well as benefits resulting from the growth of the tourist industry, people who move from one community to another to live, encounter a number of difficulties, particularly if the change is from a less to a more technologically sophisticated society. The problems may stem from the faster pace of life due to the competitive pressures of business and industry, or the everyday hassle of coping with traffic and people, possibly in a different language. The stresses of these sorts of situation have been well-recognised and frequently described as "culture shock"—the effect of moving from the security of familiar surroundings to the uncertainties of an unknown and potentially threatening environment. In the new situation the social traditions and values may be quite different and the individual's background of experience and knowledge of his own culture may be quite inappropriate. Nevertheless, where a group of such people have made the same move, they are able to provide some familiar reassuring presence and support to assist the individual to cope with his new life.

Not so generally acknowledged is the considerable impact which advances in knowledge and their application can make to the way of life of an individual in his own life-time in his own community. In my relatively restricted fifty years of experience for example, I can remember as a child, the installation of electricity at home replacing the old gas lamps, my father buying his first radio set and, of course, all the delivery services in those days being provided by horse and cart. And this was in the heart of what is referred to these days as swinging London! Much has been written and said about the pace of life in modern society and the stress which this imposes on people who may indeed be pushed to their adaptive tolerance limits-a condition which Alvin Toffler⁵ refers to as "Future Shock". But in his very stimulating book on the topic, while he suggests that "Future Shock" is very similar to "Culture Shock" except that it arises from the progressive rather than sudden super-imposition of a new culture on an old one, the problems may be much greater since the supportive structure of the community's traditional values are themselves undergoing change.

Instead of a stable base of conventions unchanged from one generation to the next, rapid scientific advances have brought in their wake much rethinking of values as for example in respect of the traditional role of women in society and the importance of marriage since the advent of the pill. Furthermore, due to the increasing variety of pressures and sources of influence stemming in part, from the improved cross-cultural flow of information, new sets of values may be adopted by different individuals within any given society giving rise to a wider range of life styles than hitherto.

But "Culture Shock" and "Future Shock" are only perhaps extreme examples of difficulties of adaptation and communication which are nevertheless evident throughout any society at any time but which may be much more evident today due to the greater mobility of people and the development of the mass media. For in sending a message from one person to another sharing the same language for example, it is very easy for misunderstandings to occur simply because the assumptions made by the sender about the background and experience of the receiver are not justified. He only knows this however, when the receiver responds in a somewhat unexpected way.

But I am not referring here to such features as the niceties of grammar or to how articulate a speaker may be although I should not wish to belittle their contribution to questions of clarity of communication. I am concerned particularly with the formulation and conveying of attitudes about the subject matter of the message as well as the communication of the message itself. Too often they are not differentiated with the consequence that either embarrassment, offence or disaster results and a considerable expenditure of effort is needed to retrieve the situation.

In the last twenty-five years there have been great advances in communication theory and these have been applied with some success to the receiving and generating information processes of people. Unfortunately although it is clear that attitudes toward the subject matter of a message also convey information, they are not so well understood or measured. Yet the attitudes conveyed by some messages are far more important than the message itself, or to paraphrase a once popular song . . "Its not what you say but the way that you say it—thats what gets results"! And insofar as attitudes are a reflection of the values held by an individual, it is clear that there are many problems associated with addressing someone whose background is unknown. This of course must be the situation when communicating with any large body of people and especially by means of the mass media, since at least some of those addressed will have backgrounds which do not match the majority of those for whom the message was intended.

Judging from the last few years, since approximately half of the graduates from universities tend to become teachers of one sort or another, the recognition of individual differences as well as cultural differences in the meaning which may be attached to particular forms of expression, is clearly important. For those graduates who end up in management positions, it is equally necessary to ensure that there is no ambiguity in the meaning of communications to and from staff, patients, clients or other organisations.

Apart from the many opportunities which are presented both formally and in other ways at universities for a consideration of the current trends in our society and their implications, one of the important features of any university education is the emphasis on discriminating between fact and opinion, between an observation and a judgement made in relation to that observation based on community values or some other criterion. Graduates then, should be sensitive to the importance of maintaining these distinctions in everyday communication and be peculiarly well prepared not only to avoid the pitfalls of ambiguity in the meaning of the messages themselves, but also to make a positive contribution to human understanding by taking care to avoid expressing attitudes in the messages which may be interpreted differently by different people.

As the degree of communication and interaction between people with different backgrounds and experience grows, so there is an increasing need for attention to the likely sources of friction and misunderstanding between them. Certainly those of you who are graduating today will, I am sure, be faced with many more problems of this kind than have beset graduates in the past. If then, in the years ahead, the relevance of the subject matter of your studies at university becomes less due to further advances in knowledge and your changing responsibilities, I hope that you will, while preserving your own set of values which has carried you so successfully so far, nevertheless maintain a healthy respect for the values of others with whom you will need to communicate in one form or another.

Once again, let me offer you my congratulations and best wishes for the future.

At the afternoon ceremony on 5 May, 1976, Mr. W. D. Gould, addressed the congregation as follows:

Deputy Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor, Members of the Council and Senate of the University of Adelaide, ladies and gentlemen.

When the Vice-Chancellor spoke to me some months ago about speaking to you at today's ceremony, he asked what I would speak about. I replied that I might speak about "The University and the Community", and the concept of non-growth that was, last year, applied to this University, as well as to several other older Australian universities.

Such a topic needs to be seen in a broad context. The framework within which I propose to discuss this question includes the responsibility that the University has to the wider community. This is not dissociated from the difficult question of an autonomous body which is funded externally. The problem is not made any easier in times of economic restraint, such as we are experiencing today. I believe that these are questions to be considered in terms of the principles involved, rather than on the basis of ad-hoc decisions. I cannot subscribe to the view of a prominent Australian who said, several years ago, that problems should be resolved in the light of the then present day circumstances rather than in terms of long range considerations.

To succeed in my argument, I must establish that the University does indeed have a responsibility to the wider community. Over many years, the concept developed that Universities are "ivory tower" organisations. This may have been possible in those places which were able to fund themselves through wealthy patrons, or other benefactors. And, indeed, the sorts of freedoms that were possible within such institutions may still be the desire of present day academics and their students. But unless we are to lead somewhat cloistered lives, all of us within the University community must be sensitive to the world outside.

I want to draw particular attention to the dynamic nature of this interaction. Our society, through a long evolutionary process, has recognised the benefits of trained minds. Although any training was for a long time the preserve of the privileged few, it is now possible for anyone with a mind to be trained to receive a formal education. But society, by its nature, is not so magnanimous as to allow its teaching institutions a completely free hand in what instruction will be offered. The community has its perceived needs and pleasures, and expects that the University will meet these. If the University does not, then the community will tend to withdraw its support and the University will fall on lean times. On the other side of the coin, the University is continually at pains to inform the community of its work and progress and of new advances that are being made.

Both the University and the community are continuously providing this feedback to each other and for this reason alone the University is unable to be an isolated and separate entity. Since the community is prepared to invest in the University the responsibility of preparing people to administer its needs, the University, if it accepts and shoulders this, must accept the responsibility which it has to the wider community.

I wish to return to the question of externally funded autonomous bodies, and the problems associated with being labelled a non-growth University. Many of you present today will recall that this University has been established as an autonomous body under a State Act of Parliament, and that the University Council has the entire management and superintendence of the affairs of the University. This is all very well until we recall that the Council's capacity to govern is subject to the power of the purse, and that the controlling strings are presently held by the Commonwealth Treasury. Many will hold the belief that a country's government, whose function is the good governance of the country, has a responsibility to ensure the ordered development of a country's resources, including those of manpower. Such a responsibility obviously conflicts with the notion of the University's autonomy, and in the present climate has recently led to suggestions that Universities are reluctant to fulfil their role of critically commenting on society. To be actively doing this, scientists should be prepared to be publicly critical of government science policy, economists should be prepared to be publicly critical of government economic policy, and so on. Yet it seems that many academic experts, whilst privately dissenting, are afraid to speak out against government policies for fear that funds to Universities may be cut. Reluctance to speak one's mind in a responsible manner may be the norm under some totalitarian regimes, but seems singularly inappropriate in a country such as Australia which is renowned for the freedoms its residents enjoy.

There are some individuals who become well-known for their capacity to make significant contributions to the discussion of public issues. In this connection, I feel it is appropriate to refer to the University's Visitor, Sir Mark Oliphant. Many will be aware that his term as Governor of the State is concluding later this year, but his period in office will be remembered for the occasions on which he has been prepared to speak his mind on issues on which the community around him had not reached a consensus view. Any person prepared to subscribe to high principles must also be prepared to defend them when they draw fire from those with opposing views, and Sir Mark is to be commended for the several contributions he has made in recent years and for his preparedness to argue in defence of high principles.

I think all of us here today are more than aware of the difficult economic times in which we exist. For the University, this problem has been most forcefully presented by it being labelled a non-growth University. In brief, this means that the University must stabilise its student and staff numbers, and carry on its activities with a recurrent grant from the Government which is not significantly different in real terms. The immediate implication of this is that any expansion in one area of the University is at the expense of a contraction in another. Up until recently the University had been able to expand as it wished, with funds being provided to support projects and new courses, once they were considered academically desirable. The new situation means than many academically desirable activities cannot be implemented, even though the outside community may well expect them to be.

What are the major external influences which have led to the University being in a non-growth situation? I see two main influences.

Firstly, the changing distribution of Australia's population and, secondly, what I regard as the non-expanding nature of the economy.

Recent analyses of the distribution of Australia's population have shown that its average age is now increasing, and that the result of this is that there will be a smaller pool of workers who will have to finance benefits for the economically non-active. This latter group of people includes both those who have retired and those who have not yet entered the work force. On this occasion this latter group interests us. Education in this country, and particularly tertiary education, has reached the level it has through the input of taxpayers' money. With fewer workers to maintain this support, each worker will have to provide more through taxes or else less can be provided. Either will be unpopular, but as more and more is being demanded of the taxpayer's dollar in other areas, it seems to me that education in this country could easily suffer.

This last point touches on the nature of the economy. In a growth economy, more of everything needs to be produced to satisfy the demands of the increasing numbers of people who maintain demand. The problems which are arising are somewhat like the problems with pyramid selling when the bottom falls out of the pyramid. In the field of education, two particular problems emerge and these relate to the staff and students of the University. With the present nongrowth situation following a period of quite rapid expansion, the University finds itself with a somewhat inflexible staff establishment. During the sixties and early seventies, the University recruited heavily and employed many staff aged in their twenties and thirties. With little incentive to shift, if only because of the difficulty of obtaining positions elsewhere, many of these staff will remain in this University for the rest of this century. The University must, in my opinion, be very mindful of the obvious danger that its staff may cease to be innovative, to experiment with new ideas, and to act in their traditional role as critics of society.

For the students, the obvious difficulty is to obtain suitable employment. I shall use one example to illustrate my point. Until last year, many Arts and Science graduates were able to obtain employment as school teachers. For many years both Universities and other tertiary institutions had been producing graduates for the teaching profession. Tertiary education in this country has been geared up to this production, and there had been expected to be a demand for teachers for many years to come. Last year, our own State government was not able to guarantee that all those graduates, even those with a teaching qualification, would be able to be employed within the State's schools.

Deputy Chancellor, if I may draw these several threads together, I have been suggesting that the University should renew its efforts to be sensitive to the demands which are placed on it, and which are going to be placed on it, by the outside community. I have attempted to show that there is a dynamic interaction between the University and the wider community, and that there are economic and demographic forces which considerably influence the nature of this interaction. I have argued that, even in times of uncertainty, the University should not abdicate its responsibilities to the community by being reluctant to function as a critic of society.

To those of you graduating today, I say that you should not regard my words as grim forebodings, but as an indication of what I regard as exciting challenges which lie beyond the walls of this University. I hope that your time within these walls has fitted you well to meet these challenges; and I offer you my congratulations for the successful completion of your courses.

THE SENATE

Until 29 April, 1971 the Senate of the University consisted of all graduates admitted to a degree of Master or Doctor and of all other graduates of the University of three years' standing. A graduate of another University admitted to a degree in The University of Adelaide reckoned his standing from the date of his graduation in such other University.

On 29 April, 1971 a new act, "The University of Adelaide Act, 1971" came into force. Under it, the Senate consists of all graduates of the University; all persons in the full-time employment of the University who are graduates of other Universities recognised by the University or who have attained at other institutions of higher learning qualifications considered by the University to be of a status equivalent to that of a degree of the University; and all postgraduate students. postgraduate students.
