WILD WEST PROGRAMME.

WILD WEST FRONTIER LIFE.

By Captain Sutton, his band of Cowboys and Indians.

SCENE I.—HUNTER'S CABIN—Scene from real life in Rocky Mountains, where the hunter returns loaded with game after his successful trip—He is attacked by Indians, killed, scalped, and cabin burnt.

SCENE II.—Emigrant train—Showing the peril of the early pioneers in crossing the American Deserts, where they have to contend against horse thieves, road agents, and Indians—Introducing the Chase for a Bride, adapted from the Indians in early history, and the celebrated Sioux Indians' Sun Dance around the fire stake. Fight with Cowboys and Indians.

SCENE III.—Picking up objects from the ground, which is just as necessary to learn as riding, as oft-times the Cowboys in lassoing an animal lose their ropes. They then have to gallop after the animal and pick up the end of the lasso—The Arkansaw Kid will show that it is as easy to pick up in an English saddle as a Californian saddle.

SCENE IV.—The Cowboys will illustrate the Hanging of a Horse-Thief, or Lynch Law on the Frontier of Texas.

SCENE V.—Attack on the Deadwood Coach by Indians, and rescue by Cowboys, a scene taken from real life between Cheyenne City and Deadwood in the early history of the Black Hills in 1876.

SCENE VI.—BUCKING HORSES—Showing the American system of breaking in wild and vicious Broncos that inhabit the Western Prairies, in perfect safety to both man and beast. The Cowboys are prepared to ride bucking horses against any man in South Australia for any sum of money or for nothing, to show the superiority of their horsemanship. The Wirth Bros. will be very grateful to any gentleman who has a bucking or unbroken horse for their Cowboys to handle, which they will do in perfect safety. We guarantee to break the horse gently and without injury, and will be responsible for all damages to the horse.

SCENE VII.—LASSOING—Showing the mode of catching horses or cattle by the neck or legs for branding or other purposes.

SCENE VIII.—INDIANS REVENGE. Introducing a sensational knife fight between an Indian Chief and Cowboy.

This Programme is subject to slight alteration if deemed necessary by the Management.
