Register, Nov 16/12

The contemplated retirement of Mr. F. Chapple, B.A., B.Sc., from the head mastership of Prince Alfred College, in which capacity he has done such distinguished work for education in South Australia since 1876, has been known for some time, and it has now been definitely announced that Mr. Chapple will retire at the end of 1914. He will thus complete his thirty-ninth year of service at the college, and have his fortieth on leave. The close of his almost unique term of activity as the head master of a great public school will be an occasion of widespread regret, and it will mark the termination of a memorable epoch in the history of Prince Alfred College. Few educationists in the Commonwealth have established so excellent a reputation as Mr. Chapple. He was born in London in 1845, and came to Adelaide in April, 1876, after a distinguished career at the London University, and with teaching experience gained as a master of Westminster Training College. He at once entered upon his duties as Principal of Prince Alfred College, which had achieved a high position under Mr. Fiddian and Mr. Hartley (afterwards Inspector-General of State Schools). In addition to his immediate work at the college Mr. Chapple has interested himself in education generally, and was one of the foundation members of the Council of the Adelaide University. The college committee, in acceding to Mr. Chapple's request that he should retire at the end of 1914, adopted the following resolution:—"While granting the request of Mr. Chapple to retire from the head mastership of Prince Alfred College at the end of 1914, this committee place on record their devout gratitude to Almighty God for the blessings which have accompanied his labours. They desire to testify to their admiration of the noble work which the head master has accomplished during the tenure of his high office for the past 37 years. The college buildings, which during those years have been tripled in size at a cost of between £35,000 and £40,000—towards which gifts and endowments amounting to £20,000 have been received—are Mr. Chapple's visible material monument. A more precious memorial is to be found in the training—physical, mental, moral, and religious—received by the 470 boys who have come under his care—training which has uplifted and influenced for good the life of this State. More than 250 of these scholars have graduated at the University, many with distinction and carrying off its highest rewards. While preserving the distinctive character of Methodist college, the head master leadership has always been on broad Catholic lines, and consequently the institution has commanded the confidence and support of members of all other denominations. We are proud to record that Mr. Chapple's qualities as an educationist have been recognised in his election to many years past as a member of the council of the University, and in his being chosen ever since 1883 as warden of the University. This committee trust that Mr. Chapple may long enjoy his well-earned retirement, and that he may have the happiness of witnessing the continued and expanding usefulness of the college to which he has ungrudgingly devoted the best years of his life and the welfare of which is near his heart." It was also resolved to present him upon his retirement with £1,000, in recognition of his great service to the college. The Prince Alfred Collegians' Association on Thursday evening at its annual meeting, placed on record a high appreciation of Mr. Chapple's work and it was mentioned that there would be other opportunities of doing him honour. The Secretary of the Prince Alfred College Committee (Mr. J. H. Chinner) stated on Friday that the question of entering into negotiations for the appointment of a successor to Mr. Chapple would not engage the attention of the committee until next year.

MR. F. CHAPPLE

Register, Nov. 16/12

—University and Country Children.—

The position of country children under the New South Wales Government's proposed university reform proposals was referred to by Mr. Carmichael (Minister of Public Instruction), at Tamworth, last week. "If parents cannot afford to keep their boys during their university career," he said, "they will get a living allowance under the Bursaries Act from the Government. Under ordinary conditions the country child would not be able to compete equally with the city child, who has better chances of tuition and facilities. The Government has met this difficulty with a special provision that the children in country centres will compete one with the other, and not with children taught in the schools in the cities and larger towns. In a word, the new arrangement works out that the child of a parent attending the smallest out-back school will, if he shows the ability, be able to pass from that school free of all cost to the high school, and from there again free of all cost to the university, thus gaining all the advantages of the highest education."
