LATE LIEUT. R. C. BRAGG.

Lieut. Robert C. Bragg has been killed at the Dardanelles. The news was received in Adelaide on Friday by Dr. C. E. Todd, an uncle of the deceased officer, from Professor W. L. Bragg, Professor of Physics at the London University and formerly of the Adelaide University. Lieut. Bragg was only 22 years of age. He was educated at St. Peter's College, and prior to his enlistment as a private in the Royal Field Artillery was at Trinity College, Cambridge. Shortly after joining the regiment in question Lieut. Bragg received his commission, and was sent to the Dardanelles about seven weeks ago. He was an enthusiastic oarsman, and rowed in the Trinity Eight (Cambridge). But for an unfortunate indisposition the young officer might have been included in the famous Cambridge crew. When Professor Bragg was appointed to the Chair of Physics at the Leeds University, Lieut. Bragg accompanied his father to the Yorkshire town. He was a brother of Mr. W. L. Bragg, whose scientific research work in collaboration with his father gained the highest distinction in science—the Barnard Medal—awarded by the Columbia University.

ALLIES AND A "DRAW."

HOBART, September 15.

Prior to the adjournment of the House of Assembly to-day, Mr. Payne referred to a lecture delivered by Mr. Heaton, of the University Extension Board, in which he said that a draw should be all that should be aimed at by the Allies, and that there was no proof that the Allies had not been guilty of atrocities similar to those perpetrated by the Germans. The statement caused the greatest dissent, and the Minister promised an investigation.
