FloverTisER. 301 UNEMPLOYMENT IN GREAT

The MacDonald Government on their defeat last year left the evil of unem-ployment in the mather country worse than they found it when they took office than they found it when they took once. They had always claimed, as against Conservatives and Liberals, that they had a plan for solving the problem, but they made, in fact, no attempt to improve the conditions of industry. it be pleaded in their defence that they were denied an opportunity of testing for trade depression), their position is this respect was no worse than is that are not permitted to try tariff prote tion, though they are making, it is true a liberal use of the provision of tha essentially protectionist statute, Safeguarding of Industries Act. withstanding its own failure, Labor in the House of Commons has not hesitated to attack the Baldwin Government for neglecting to propose measures deal adequately with unemployment but any hope of gathering support from disaffected elements in the Conservative Party, who object to the coal subsidy restoration of the gold standard, and the delay in the materiali sation of a policy of economy that would allow of a reduction of taxation would allow of a reduction of taxation has been disappointed. Mr. Shaw's censure motion last week was rejected on a division by 322 votes to 133 after debate in which the Government vigorously contested the mover's stateme industries are looking up; that there are slight signs of recovery in the iron and steel trades; and that with big cotton, wheat, rice, and other crops there is some hope for even the hardest hit industry of all—shipbuilding. It is futile, the Minister complains to condemn the Baldwin Governmen that the unemployment difficulty becoming more serious than ever. While the total out of work, it appears, is still higher than it was at this time last year, Ministers have been pointing to recent decrease in the figures. Sir A. Steel Maitland confidently asserts that there is a distinct improvement in
