

The Galton Laboratory,
Rothamsted Experimental Station,
Harpenden, Herts.

August 26, 1940

Dear Whately Carington,

I have begun reading your big paper in the Journal of Psychological Research, but at present so discontinuously that I can say nothing about it. I am glad that you seem to have positive results, though I am sorry that they are not the results which the experiment was originally designed to test. I wonder if it would be possible ever to make a direct test designed to demonstrate the phenomenon which now appears to show up.

Yours sincerely,