Dear Fisher.

The other evening you were asking me about the taxonomy of extinct hominids. I find I have a few copies of this book still on hand, & so I am sending you one for your acceptance. I was rather annoyed by one review which appeared to imply that I was actually opposed to the use of statistical methods of enquiry in the study of fossil hominids - but I am sure it is clear from the first lecture of the book that what I object

It is the essential, & in some cases erroneous, application of statistics by the common transmission - which, if not checked, may result in serious distortions in found.
