

January 13, 1939

Dear Darwin,

The enclosed is not an attempt to waste your time, which I am sure is fully occupied with more important things, but is sent on the chance that, if you find time to glance through it, you might be able to tell me if I have misrepresented physical opinion on the principle of indeterminacy. - This, of course, I should hate to do. My blunders may be of some use if they reveal how much an ordinary mathematician may be misled by the expositions currently available.

Do not hesitate to send it back unread.

Yours sincerely,

Letter for Bascom Club.