Dear Tootill,

I wrote up the mathematics of the distributions some time ago, and this has been <sup>sent</sup> given in, with a note from Healy on the computational procedure, to the Journal of the Royal Statistical Society, Methodological Section, which only comes out about twice a year, and will doubtless take its time. This note does not include the tabular values themselves, which are reserved for the next edition of 'Statistical Tables', which may well be out just as soon, I hope this year. I suppose both should be described as "in the press" and given this year's date provisionally. Before you publish there should be more exact information.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Tootill,

I find I have a copy of the paper sent in by Healy and myself, the analysis of which you might like to see. There is an algebraic table at the end, covering rather more ground than Healy's tables of the numerical values, which I put in so as to exhibit the algebraic nature of the solutions.

I gather from recent material that W.-U. Behrens is still alive and writing on agricultural statistics. This makes it rather curious that I have <sup>never</sup> ~~not~~ heard from him during the long period in which I have been writing to call attention to his solution of his problem. Perhaps he was afraid, as a German, of receiving a rebuff. His name, however, sounds rather Jewish.

Please send the material back as soon as it has served your purpose, as it is my only complete copy.

Sincerely yours,

Enc.
