My dear Ron:

I am lecturing in the University here this evening. Before leaving Oxford I was anxious to get off a reply to you in regard to your kind letter about the Genetical Society.

In the hurry, I forgot to say that I have sent off that note to Mary (for Evolution). I of course incorporated the verbal change you suggested (an improvement). I also divided into two a couple of rather long sentences. I think it makes it a bit easier reading and, as no change in lease is involved, I did not hold things up by returning it to you again.

Sincerely,
Henry
