

September 1st, 1942

My dear Henry,

I have been meaning to write to you for weeks, but my own position has always been so uncertain that I have put it off.

Nicolette decided later to stay longer with her brother in Derbyshire, but the children are now at home with Margaret as house-keeper. They would all be delighted if you would run the risk and stay the next week-end with us, if this happened to suit you. There are a lot of things I should like to discuss. Sorry to make this notice so short. Of course if the following week suits better, just let us know.

Yours sincerely,

R.A.FISHER

Professor Fisher dictated this letter just before leaving, so to catch the post his signature is typed.
