

OXFORD
EN147.

5, APSLEY ROAD,
OXFORD.

March 15th 1940.

My dear Fisher,

Your kind of you to have sent the histograms redrawn.
They are very nice indeed and I am returning them. Thank you so much.

The foot-note, which
I also return, is most excellent.
I have the proofs waiting ready to send off if the Cambridge
Press wants them. Alternatively,

I will arrange for a painting.

This is my first day out. On Monday my temperature went up to nearly 103, and I had to go to bed. I must have got a chill before I was properly over influenza - such a nuisance.

I was not quite sure which volume you intended for the Gallton Lecture, but I knew you thought of a number following that in which the Sully sales paper is to appear. This arrangement seems very nice.

I trust you are better yourself now.

Yours sincerely,

E. B. Ford