

DEPARTMENT OF ZOOLOGY AND COMPARATIVE ANATOMY, UNIVERSITY MUSEUM, OXFORD.

Wednesday.

late October 1939

My dear Fisher,

- JKB

Do you know of any recent work on blood and blood-transfusion, collecting the knowledge together in a satisfactory way? I am needing something on the lines of that book by Latta (1932, English Edition, Individuality of the Blood, Oxford), but more up to date.
I am sorry to bother you, but as you are so much in touch with serology, I thought perhaps you might know of something.

I have often looked back with pleasure to the delightful week - and I spent with you. It was awfully nice to have the opportunity of seeing the last - testing: an immense interest to me.

I have been wondering how the Galton Laboratory is getting on: Did you have to go on an excursion into your own Department? When you can spare the time, do let me know what happened. By the way, I am very glad The Times published your letter.

It was just right, and must surely have done something.

If you are sending that note ~~to~~ to Nature, would you kindly order 75 reprints ~~for~~ ^{for} me? Let me know the cost when you hear it.

With kind regards to Mrs. Fisher.

Yours sincerely,
E. B. Ford
