

10th June, 1958.

My dear Henry,

Thank you enormously for letting me see your draft address. We overlap a bit but I think no more than is desirable. I am sending you herewith what mine has grown to. It is now aimed at being about thirty minutes. I was delighted to read yours, and that you had said something about Cyril Darlington, for I regret to say I had omitted to, though as you will see I have brought in names enough. I will be delighted to read of your election.

Sincerely yours,

Enc.
