

4th December, 1950.

My dear Henry,

If it did not make too trying a day, I should suggest your coming down to Cambridge on the evening of the 8th. The last two trains are the 11.10 p.m. from King's Cross, and the 10.0 p.m. from Liverpool Street. If you can tear yourself away from Julian's meeting in time for the latter, you can be in bed about twelve. Anyway, I will provisionally book a room for you on that, and the following nights, so that the porter may expect you about midnight.

If you can possibly spare the time, I hope you may be able to make the three nights this time, as we shall surely have a lot to say to each other.

Sincerely yours,
