

16 March 1931.

Professor S. Stanley Gardiner,
Zoological Laboratory,
CAMBRIDGE.

Dear Professor Stanley Gardiner,

I saw Huxley the other day, and he suggested that if Gray was not very keen to take part in the population discussion, Elton could make a very useful zoological contribution on the fluctuations in the population of wild species. I think the idea is a good one.

Yours sincerely,