

13 January 1931.

Professor J. S. Gardiner,
Zoological Laboratory,
CAMBRIDGE.

Dear Professor Gardiner,

I enclose an offprint of an article of eighteen months ago. You will see that I take a very different view of the economic situation from the Malthusians. I think it had the effect that in his recent broadcast talks Carr Saunders claimed no economic advantage, but only an aesthetic advantage from the present halt in population growth.

Yours sincerely,