

3rd February, 1959.

Dear Bradford Hill,

Thanks for your note. It is good of you to think of putting more work into these data, and I cannot think it very rewarding. I do not believe I should draw the line at those who said they had always been only cigarette smokers (~~from who - the smokers~~), but rather try to distinguish those who regularly smoke cigarettes for their daily satisfaction, from those who are properly pipe smokers but for social reasons, or convenience, or in mercy to the drawing room curtains, are induced on occasion to smoke cigarettes. To me it is a matter of the kind of temperament which seeks different kinds of satisfaction.

Sincerely yours,

Prof. A. Bradford Hill, C.B.E., F.R.S.
