

29 December 1944

My dear Jackson,

I am very glad to hear that you are in England again, and write to tell you that, as I have been asked to go East for a spell this winter, I shall only be in Cambridge until about the 10th or 12th of January. Consequently, it is a good thing that you have arranged to get here as early as the 8th, or I should have missed you altogether.

I do hope you will manage to come, and not be inhibited by our transport system.

Yours sincerely,
