

19 January 1931.

Dr D.A.Keen,
Director's bungalow,
Poona India.

Dear Keen,

I think Balwukand is your man. It is true his published work from here, and his heavy computing was confined to the resistance formula, but I preached experimental design to him from first to last and gave him a lot of experience on special experiments and uniformity trials. In fact I think he would be very specially qualified for (a) and (b) of your requirements; as regards (c) I cannot judge directly, but he has done a lot of teaching, and you would probably get direct information as to his recent lectures on plot technique. It would be great luck to find another Indian equally qualified.

I am glad Nature amused you; I was quite surprised that Punnett was rash enough to take the cases seriatim.

Yours sincerely,