Dear Kendall,

Can I really have omitted to acknowledge your paper on k -statistics? If so, it must have been through handing your paper round the Laboratory for its general interest, instead of attending to it and answering it myself at once. As a matter of fact, I sent it to the printer the day before yesterday with the other material for Volume X, No. 2, and for which it came just in time. I should like to congratulate you heartily on clearing up the confusion in which I left this part of the argument, which I think, with the aid of your ordered statement, should not now give rise to difficulty.

Yours sincerely,
