

4 July 1933.

Dr. E.S. Pearson,
University College,
Gower Street,
London, W.C. 1.

Dear Pearson:

Yes, I shall certainly want to use the Animal House, but I had not heard of the lady. With the limited number of animals I can hope to keep, I do not see that I shall need outside assistance. Of course I might find later that I did need it.

I had thought of offering two courses personally, both quite tentatively to explore the demand:-

- (i) On the logic of experimentation,
- (ii) On the genetics of quantitative inheritance.

Both will be statistical I think only in a sense which should not inconvenience your department, but how mathematical will depend on the audience.

I will send you what I draft.

Yours sincerely,