Dear Dr. Thomson,

Thank you for sending me the new tables you have prepared of what has been called the Fisher-Behrens Test. I appreciate that, as you suggest, there is a great deal ^{to be said for} ~~suggest~~ in using \sin^2 instead of the angle, and will discuss the matter with Dr. Yates. In any case, I am sure your new tables should be published, and should like to know whether you are arranging for this, or would like me to explore the possibility of publishing either in a later edition of Statistical Tables or, let us say, in the Research Section, series B, of the Royal Statistical Society.

Yours sincerely,
